1. The Riga power plant, on the eastern bank of the Dvina River, was completely pulled down in 1945 and rebuilt between 1945 and 1948. In the first six months of the reconstruction about 200 men were employed on the reconstruction. Later the work force increased to 800 men and was 1,800 men between February and May 1947. Mostly PW's were employed. The plant started operations in January-February of 1948 and took over the job of supplying power to the town. 25X1

2. [redacted] the Keggum Power Plant, south of Riga, was also being reconstructed and expanded. Three turbines had allegedly been installed. The first turbine was said to have been in operation early in 1948. 25X1
